PARIS, KENTUCKY TUESDAY, JANUARY 1, 1907.

NUMBER 1.

We Wish You One and All a Happy and Prosperous New Year.

The year just closed has been a prosperous one for all—the merchant, the farmer and the printer. In our business rounds we find that our merchants generally have had a good year, and an unusually big holiday trade. Liberal advertising has had something to do with this and the News wants to express its gratitude to those who have so liberally given it its share of their advertising and job work. During the past year we have enlarged the News to accommodate our advertisers and have in every way tried to give them good results, and are glad to learn from many of them that our efforts were appreciated and that the results showed for themselves.

Our aim in the future will be to give you a newsy and interesting paper and the very latest in job work, and we trust you will still favor us with your patronage.

The News wishes one and all a happy and prosperous New Year.

Policeman Burke Assaulted.

Policeman James Burke went up on Eighth street last night about 10:30 o'clock and arrested some unknown colored man. While coming down Eighth street, with his prisoner, a supposed pal of the man under arrest sneaked up behind him and assaulted him with a pair of brass knucks, inflicting a severe scalp wound and the second blow breaking his nose. He fell to the street in an unconscious condition and both negroes made their escape.

Burke was found by some friends later and carried to Drs. Kenney & Dudley's office and as we go to press, after midnight, Mr. Burke had regained consciousness and was resting easy.

It was reported last night that his assailant was a negro desperado by the name of Albert Clay. He is well-known to the police and will no doubt be captured.

A posse was looking for him as we go to press.

The purchase price was from $5 to $25 per cwt. This is one of the largest consignments of fat cattle that ever left that county and were shipped in a special train to the eastern markets.

Death of Mrs. Nannie Brown.

Mrs. Nannie Brown, aged 60 years, died at her home, on Main street, Friday night, of heart failure, after years of ill health.

Mrs. Brown has conducted a millinery and notion store in this city for many years and had many friends. She had been an invalid for many years, but bore her suffering with unusual fortitude, and her death under the circumstances was indeed a sad one. Her daughter, Miss Jessie Brown, was at work on her books. Her mother, who was sitting in her chair, where she had slept for several years, being unable to lie down, became unusually still, and Miss Jessie called to her twice and receiving no answer rushed to her side and found that she had passed quietly into the eternal sleep. The screams of this devoted and self-sacrificing daughter caused two gentlemen to rush up the stairway from the street, and they remained with her until friends were notified and came to her. The love and beautiful attention by this young lady for an invalid mother for years, you might say sacrificing her young life in trying to give her every comfort, is worthy not only of mention but of emulation for the young girls of today.

Mrs. Brown was the daughter of the late Jas. McCann, and was a sister of Commodore McCann, of the U. S. N., who died two years ago at his home in New York, and of the late Charles McCann. She is survived by one daughter, Miss Jessie Brown, and three brothers and two sisters, James R. McCann, of New Jersey, the noted actor, of Toledo, O., and Ed McCann, of Richmond, Ky.; Mrs. Louise Hale, and Mrs. Carpenter, of Louisville.

The funeral occurred from the residence Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, the services being conducted by Elder Carey E. Morgan, and the burial at the Paris cemetery. The pall bearers were James Stewart, J. A. Stern, J. B. Northeott, A. J. Winters, W. S. Ray and C. B. Mitchell.

We have the right goods at right prices. That's all.

TO THE PUBLIC.

During this happy season of "Peace on Earth, Good Will to Men," I am mindful of the fact that the people of Bourbon and the adjoining counties have been exceedingly liberal in their patronage in the past. I am deeply grateful, and in announcing that in the future I will be found at the same old stand, I solicit a continuance of their good will.

I extend to all a wish for a Merry Christmas and Happy and Prosperous New Year.

The Country Press the Standby of Democracy.

This New Year is what is called an "off year" in politics preparatory to the great contest of 1908. But a few states hold elections and those will be of no great importance, except as showing which way the political wind blows. The year of 1907 is therefore a good time for propaganda work amongst those who need the gospel of Democracy preached to them. Every Democrat can have his share towards ushering in the Democratic millennium when "equal rights to all and special privileges to none" will be consummated. The first step to support your local Democratic newspaper. It may not be all you think ought to be, but give encouragement to the editor and you will be surprised what improvement it will show. If he is struggling under a load almost heavy to bear, help him out by advancing a dollar or two on your subscription.

The greater daily newspapers are good enough in their way, but if you afford but one paper the home one is indispensable. It is a digest of the doings of your community. It announces your birth, it chronicles your youth doings, it narrates the story of your marriage, and in recording your death suppresses your idiosyncrasies and magnifies your good qualities so that even St. Peter when you approach the "gates ajar" will exclaim, "good man, your record for righteous deeds has preceded you and your sins are forgiven."

Who therefore that is a Democrat can fail to support the local newspaper that heralds to a waiting world the doings of himself and his community? Having subscribed and paid in advance you have the inherent right to express your opinion on the political events of the day and the editor will be glad to hear from you. The wise editor is the organ of public opinion and if he attempts to lead it, he generally is pretty sure of strong backing before committing the newspaper into untrodden fields.

The Democratic county newspaper is the watchman on the tower to guard the everlasting truths of Democracy, without it the people would have no defender and the grafters and corruptionists would have a free field without even public criticism.

Democrats hold up the hands of the country editor.

The New Year.

The year that is passed, has forever gone. It has left us only the lessons of our experiences. If we profit from those experiences we can much better avail ourselves of the opportunities of the year before us. As the old year goes out, and the new comes in, we can engage ourselves profitably in taking account of stock.

Every person, no matter how humble his station in life, has an account to balance. His thoughts, words, deeds and acts have counted for or against himself. If for he they stand to his credit. If against him, to his debit, debit means discredit. If to his discredit, he owes just so much to his family, his friends, his community; and it should be, during the new year, his endeavor not only to cancel such indebtedness, but to place society under obligations to him. A man lives best when he places the world in his debt.

No person should be satisfied, moreover, with an evenly balanced account. If he has so lived that he has barely discharged his obligations to his fellow men, he has done more than he is morally compelled to do. If he has done more, he has been a blessing to mankind, and thus fulfilled the highest purpose of his being. It should be the ambition of every man to make the world be so that his having lived will be a cause for gratitude to all who have been blessed by him.

The new year alone presents opportunities to all of us. Opportunities to be seized when they come. Let us remember this fact, that the new year is a happy and prosperous one to all.

Tariff or Reciprocity.

The Department of State reports that the tariff struggle impending between foreign nations cannot be postponed unless the United States is willing to make reciprocal concessions on tariff rates with the countries involved in the controversy. This is, our tariff rates must be reduced if we expect to be treated as a favored nation, otherwise the prohibitive rates of duty that Germany, France and other countries are about to put in force against those nations also exact the highest rates will be also charged on imports from the United States. The report says:

"It was not denied that governments like France and Germany were willing to make material concessions, but they insist as a condition precedent to such action that the United States should be prepared to show a similar degree of generosity. This latter phase of the case, it is said, will continue to be the stumbling block to all negotiations and that unless the United States overhauls its duties on European imports in such a way as to give them a better chance in this country it will be futile to attempt to secure tariff favor from abroad."

What will our standpat statesmen do about it? Will they see our ports trade with those countries destroyed by their impassable tariff walls, those they dare not reduce the tariff that protects our own monopolists—the trusts and combines? There is no doubt that the tariff dilemma foretold by the Democrats confronts the Republicans, for if they refuse to revise the tariff considerable foreign trade will be lost, on the other hand if they attempt to "tinker with the tariff," the whole scientific structure of protectionism will tumble about their ears and they would lose the campaign contribution from the trusts which they now enjoy.

Shaw is "Nutt" on Republican Prosperity.

Secretary Shaw has been a great advocate of Republican prosperity, but it now appears that he is getting too much of it, for he declares that "we who pray should ask God to save us from any increased prosperity; we have all we can stand." He further declares, "we are growing more crops than we can harvest and harvesting more than we can haul to market." How would it do for Shaw to pray for chinch bugs and boll weevil and drought and rain in harvest time, but we trust such prayers would not be answered. But taking Shaw seriously may he not be "egging" to the fact that Republican prosperity is for the few at the expense of many who have to pay the high prices which the tariff fostered trusts are allowed to charge under Republican protection.

LOVERS' LUCK

By Constance D'Arcy Mackay

Copyright, 1905, by C. H. Sattelle

On a bright May morning as Barry O'Gill was crossing the fields by a well worn footpath, balancing a bag of meal on his back, he caught sight of Moira Nolan washing linen in the little river that brawled its way through the village of Ballymoran. The brook gushed and sang over its pebbles, and Moira's young voice sang with it as her white arms flashed in the clear water. She was on her knees, straight and supple as a willow, her bare feet tucked under her with only the rosy heels showing. The wind caught a strand of her hair and whipped it out till it shone like beaten gold in the sun. Barry paused, dazzled, and gazed at her, his mouth agape, his sack of meal forgotten on his back. Presently the girl was aware of his presence and that he was watching her.

"What are ye gaping at at all?" she questioned.

"At the loveliest girl in all Ireland," said Barry, never taking his eyes from her.

"Sorrow be to ye if your mother knew it!" laughed Moira, bending to her work again. "And angry she'd be to find ye here. Ye'd best go back to her."

Barry flushed till his cheeks were redder than his hair. "It's here that I'll stop," he said decidedly, dumping down his sack and seating himself on the grass.

Moira's thrust had been a keen one, for all the village knew that he lived in fear of his mother's tongue. "Shure, it's the sting of a wasp she has entored!" was the verdict of her neighbors, from whom the Widow O'Gill held somewhat aloof, though now and again she condescended to call on Mrs. Terhune for "a bit of gossip and a dish of tay."

Barry was Mrs. O'Gill's only child and the idol of her heart. Did he so much as look at a girl, Mrs. O'Gill was filled with alarm. So while the other lads lingered about the church steps after mass that they might see their sweethearts, Barry was hurried off homeward by his mother. Therefore it was with a sense of recklessness and novelty that he gave himself up to a talk with Moira. She bade him help her wring the clothes and then laughed at his awkwardness and splashed him with glittering drops. The time went quickly. It was noon before they knew it, and Barry sped home to his dinner and a scolding. Yet he hardly heard the words his mother heaped on him, so engrossed was he with the memory of Moira's gray eyes and the exquisite curve of her lips. Love comes swiftly when one is young in Ballymoran.

He and Moira met often after that, sometimes at the edge of the little river and sometimes on the roads by which the hawthorn hedges bloomed, a mass of pink and green. The more Barry thought of Moira the more he realized that his mother would never consent to his marriage. Moira's beauty was the only dowry the girl had. Of all the poor folk in Ballymoran she was by far the poorest.

Nor was Barry much richer. It was his mother who held the purse strings. Once, in desperation, he thought of giving up Moira, and for three whole days he did not see her. Then quite by accident he met her coming across a field. She was about to pass him with averted face.

"Moira!" he cried brokenly.

At that she turned. She was pale and there were deep shadows under her eyes. All that Barry had kept pent in his heart rushed to his lips, and Moira listened, looking down and plucking at a bit of hawthorn she held in her hand. A lark rose from the long meadow grass near by, and soaring into the air poured out a song that seemed but an echo of the ecstasy that was in their hearts. It was Moira who made the first return to earth.

"Does your mother know of it?" she questioned.

"Divine a bit," said Barry cheerfully, "and where would be the good of telling her? She'd never consent to it in the wide world. 'Tis a runaway match we'll have to make, unavowed. We'll be after taking a trip to the next parish and back some fine day."

"But where will we live at all, Barry, darling?" cried Moira, still troubled.

"Rest easy," said Barry; "I can make somewhat working in the bogs, and that will give us a bite and a sup. And there's owld McShane's cabin that's been deserted ever since he went to America. Troth, it's a ramshackle place, and there's no denying it! The roof leaks, but I can mend it with fresh turf. And though the room is as small as a nut, what a fine view we'll have from the doorway. And if the chimney is owld and smokey, after all, 'twill be our own. Arrah, trust to luck, Moira, acher! And lovers' luck, shure, it's the best of all!"

"True for ye, Barry," agreed Moira, and, happy and improvident, they drifted back into their lovers' paradise, and one morning before the first birds were astir and Ballymoran lay in the cool grayness of the dawn they slipped away to the next parish. By the middle of the afternoon they were back again, and all the village knew of their romance.

Mrs. Terhune hastened to bring the news to Mrs. O'Gill, but the latter, pushing forward a chair, did not wait for her to speak.

"Have ye seen aught of my boy Barry?" she demanded. "The lark goes soon! Gae since morning, and not a bit of work has he done the day, bad cess to him!"

It was a fine opening for Mrs. Terhune, and, sitting on the opposite side of the hearth, she told her story, Mrs. O'Gill interrupting from time to time with passionate ejaculations. "The curse of all the crows upon him! And sorrow to me for having a bowld, deceitful son murdering my heart with his cruel actions! May he never cross my threshold again! 'Tis a serpent's tooth he is, a serpent's tooth!"

Mrs. Terhune wagged her head wisely.

"He is so," she agreed, with relish, "he is so! The most good for nothing lad in the parish, and he marrying the poorest girl of it! There's not a boy for miles around but what would have more sense! My children, now, they're foina, clever lads, and, ooh, woman, dear, it's often I've said to myself I piked ye having such a great, awkward, stupid gallow for a son!"

Bar Mrs. Terhune had ventured too far while she was speaking Mrs. O'Gill's face had flushed and then paled again. After all, Barry was her own son, blood of her blood and flesh of her flesh, and the mother in her rose, armed. Eyes and voice ablaze, she turned to Mrs. Terhune.

"Share your pity," she cried breathlessly, "spare your pity! My boy has married where his heart led him, and if the girl is poor, so much the better. He is not like some I know, who spend their days hanging after the rich. Aye, ye may wince, Bridget Terhune, for ye know what I mean. Clever children, indeed! 'Tis myself that's thankful to heaven that my Barry is not like your jabbering, knock-kneed omathons! 'Twas like ye to come here with your spiteful words, and now, if ye've had your say, ye may take yourself off!"

But Mrs. Terhune had already gathered herself together and was stumbling down the road, muttering as she went. On the way she passed Barry and his bride, walking hand in hand toward the forlorn, tumble-down cabin they meant to make their home. She went by them flapping like a wet hen, and they failed to recognize in her their saving angel. Instead, they looked fearfully ahead to where Barry saw a familiar figure approaching over the crest of the hill, a spare, keen eyed woman with a red shawl about her shoulders.

Mrs. O'Gill faced the culprits grimly. "Tis a fine hour for ye to be coming home," she cried sharply. "The supper's been set for the both of ye this long time, and 'twill be ruined entirely."

She gave Moira a piercing glance. The last light of the afterglow touched the girl's face with a pale glory. "Tis a slim creature ye are," said Mrs. O'Gill, her voice softening. "When I was a girl I had bright eyes, too, and the same color o' hair. Ah, heaven be with them owld times! 'Tis long since I was young!" She turned from them abruptly and went on ahead, leading the way home.

The lovers followed in a happy daze, too overwhelmed to question how such fortune came about. "Did I not tell ye," said the rapturous Barry, "that lovers' luck is the greatest in the world?"

This Hat Always in Style.

Fashions in women's headgear come and go in regular cycles, but there is one class of women in this country who stick to one kind of hat through the summer season year after year, with never a thought to the prevailing fashions in other circles of society. These are the "canalers," who invariably are seen in the sunbonnets, no matter what part of the country their homes are aloft in. Considering that most of the time they live under the awnings suspended over their cabin homes, one would scarcely think all this shade was necessary. But they stick to their favorite hats, nevertheless. It is a curiosity of the taste in headgear of the women who spend their lives working as cooks on the vessels of the great lakes that one rarely sees a sunbonnet among them, and yet awnings on these craft are seldom used. But that is only another evidence of the fact of what variety there is among the eternal feminine.—New York Press.

A Legend of Agincourt.

For many centuries we English have plumed ourselves upon the victory of Agincourt. Indeed it is from King Henry V.'s address to his soldiers on that occasion, as given by Shakespeare, that the motto of this journal is taken, "Familiar in their mouths as household words." But the French have an account of the affair not so much to our credit. It was arranged, according to this fable, by the two leaders that only the nobles on each side were to fight. King Henry V. then artfully enrolled his whole army and hence got the best of the enemy. Shakespeare unwittingly gives a little countenance to the legend when he makes the king declare in the above mentioned address, "Be ye up'er so vile, this day shall gentle your condition."—London Standard.

Getting Into His Place.

When Governor Head was in office in New Hampshire Colonel Barrett, an estimable member of the governor's staff, died, and there was an uneasy scramble of would be successors for the office, even while his body was awaiting burial with military honors. One candidate, somewhat bolder than the rest, ventured to call upon Governor Head, thinking to ascertain the beat of the governor's mind upon the important question.

"Governor," he asked, "not to speak in a manner too positive, do you think you would have any objections if I was to get into Colonel Barrett's place?"

The answer came promptly. "No, I don't think I should have any objections, if the undertaker is willing."

THE HUMAN LOCOMOTIVE.

A certain man, because he was so strong and hearty, imagined he was a locomotive. There was, he thought, no limit to his vitality.

He regarded his stomach as the firebox. All he had to do was to keep the firebox full.

He followed the Mississippi steamboat plan, and crowded everything into his stomach.

One day when he was pulling a heavy load the firebox didn't burn right, so the Human Locomotive stopped to investigate.

He found the flames choked, the firebox full of clippers, and so stuffed with food that it couldn't even show a red glimmer.

Somebody told him to keep a clean fire with a good draught, and feed it regularly, with only a certain quantity at a time.

He was further advised to use Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets for the purpose of putting himself in first-class shape.

He did as he was told, and was soon able to pull and haul as well as ever. Besides he puffed less under a heavy load.

Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets are absolutely guaranteed to cure all the distressing forms of Dyspepsia and Indigestion, or we'll pay for all the medicine you take.

Price, 25c., at our store, or by mail.

FOOS GAS AND GASOLINE ENGINES

Last longer and give better service than any engine on the market. Why? Because only the best material and workmanship that money can buy are used in their construction. They are the most accessible, simplest and easiest to operate of any engine sold today.

A few of the superior points are: The governor, with which you can change the speed while running. Economy of fuel, due to the construction of the valves and positive action of the governor. The igniter, which makes a spark one-half inch long; will start the engine on the first turn and is guaranteed not to foul. The balance weights on the crank shaft instead of on the fly wheels, which insure steady running and minimum of wear on the bearings. The lubricating system, and lots of others that we will tell you about if you will just give us a chance. We have samples on the floor and can give you a demonstration any time.

We also carry in stock a full line of Belle City and Ross Feed Cutters, the best of their kind. Kemp Manure Spreaders, Vehicles, Wagons, Implements, Seeds, Coal, Salt, etc. You need our goods and we need your money. Give us a call.

Interesting to the Ladies.

Judging from newspaper notices regarding Miss Courtenay Morgan in "A Woman of Mystery," which will appear at the Paris Grand on Friday, January 4, the critics especially the lady dramatic writers, of whom there are a great number in the field now, unite in pronouncing the wardrobe displayed by Miss Morgan as something remarkable. It was all collected in London and Paris, and to the thousands of theatre goers who do not pay an annual visit to those famous fashion centers the display of all these magnificent creations is a really enjoyable treat. The play is said to be splendidly mounted and a carefully selected company of players in support of Miss Courtenay Morgan, who will be favorably remembered as a former member of Charles Frohman forces. The engagement is for one night only and indications point to a very large attendance.

The Bourbon Lead Mine.

A News man in conversation with Mr. John Caldwell, of near Millersburg, upon whose farm the great lead vein has been discovered, said the ores have been assayed by several experts, who pronounce it very rich, better than the Joplin mines; that the vein is from 34 to 6 feet thick, and one expert, who went down into the mine says there is not a richer or better mine in the United States. The $100,000 of the capital stock of the company has been paid in, machinery purchased and work will begin in earnest just as soon as the weather will permit.

Manager Veatch, of the East Tennessee Telephone Co., in this city, had direct connection with Washington City last midnight and the last tick of the old year at the conservatory at Washington could be distinctly heard from the receiver of the East Tennessee Co. in this city. The News office was put in connection and we all at least began the New Year with the correct time. It was wonderful how distinctly we heard the old year tick out from so great a distance.

More Tobacco Growers Sign.

The chairman of the various precincts of the Bourbon branch of the American Society of Equity met at the Court House Saturday and selected John A. LaRue to represent the county at the district meeting at Winchester today.

A number of farmers signed their crops Saturday, bringing the total acreage so far signed to over 1,200 in the county, or practically 25 per cent. of the crop.

In Clark, there has been pledged 2,916 acres out of 3,000. It has been announced that 3,178 acres, over 70 per cent., has been pledged in Harrison county. The District meeting today at Winchester should be a very interesting one for the farmers.

Daughters of Confederacy.

The Daughters of the Confederacy were entertained Friday at their rooms at the court house by Mrs. Amos Turney. Mrs. W. G. Talbott read a paper on the life, character and public services of Judge Richard Hawes, Confederate Governor of the State. Mrs. Henry Clay, whose father was Capt. Harry Bedford, read an interesting paper on the privations, hardships and sufferings of Bourbon county citizens during the Civil War.

The Daughters then took up the question of the proposed monument to be erected to the memory of General John N. Morgan, it being ascertained that the local chapter had been asked to raise the sum of $280, which they propose to do at an early date.

The next meeting of the Daughters will be held on the afternoon of January 19, when each member will consider herself hostess to the Confederate veterans of the county. An elaborate program will be arranged, including an address by ex-Congressman Albert S. Berry, of Newport. The music will be by the Elks' Band with several appropriate songs by Mrs. Princess Long. An elaborate dinner will be prepared for the old veterans, whose ranks are gradually thinning out.

Last Appeal Made to the Farmers

There was a good audience of farmers at the court house Friday afternoon to hear W. B. Sherman, of Indianapolis, Ind., and Hon. J. W. Newman, of Woodford county, made their last appeal for the farmers to sign their tobacco crops with the American Society of Equity. Quite a number have signed yet Bourbon is behind other counties in this matter.

"The battle has been fought but the victory is not yet won," said Mr. Sherman. "The trouble with Bourbon county," said Senator Newman "is that you have got too many rich men in it."

Both gentlemen made strong addresses and we cannot see why farmers hesitate so about signing.

The Other Side.

By a vote of 188 to 106, the House of Representatives recently refused to increase the salary of its members. The House took this action notwithstanding the fact that the members could not meet living expenses and other demands incident to their positions on the $5,000 a year now allowed them. Indeed, several members declared that they were out of pocket in representing their constituents, and that the honor they received in no way compensated them. The House voted as it did, because a majority of its members believed that an increase in salaries would not meet the approval of the people.

This is one side of the matter, but there is another. If it is true that members cannot meet their living expenses and the demands made upon them on account of their positions, and that many of them are out of pocket in serving their constituents, the people of this country are willing to pay them all they are worth, though the amount be twice the present salary. As a matter of fact, the people would rather pay them so well that they will not feel compelled to re-inforce their salaries by engaging in side line enterprises, or accepting favors when they come their way. The people of this country would like to feel that their whole time to the business in hand, and they are perfectly willing to pay for it.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a tea-spoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circular and testimonials. Address:

The Charming Woman

Is not necessarily one of perfect form and features. Many a plain woman who could never serve as an artist's model, possesses those rare qualities that all the world admires: neatness, clear eyes, clean smooth skin and that sprightliness of step and action that accompany good health. A physically weak woman is never attractive, not even to herself. Electric bitters restore weak women, give strong nerves, bright eyes, smooth, velvety skin, beautiful complexion. The Kentucky Law.

How the effect of the tax laws of Kentucky is viewed by a prominent Philadelphia Banker is expressed in the following extract from a letter received by a well-known Louisville Banker, who recently was elected to the Vice-Presidency of one of the largest banks of that city:

"If you people can only get a just tax law in your state then you will assume a position you are entitled to and can maintain through the inherent wealth you have, but until you do, I, as a warm, and I may say enthusiastic friend of the state, see nothing inviting in your future. I wonder whether your law-makers have ever thought of what it would mean to the state and the inhabitants thereof if they could print a prospectus offering bonds issued 'Tax free in Kentucky.' Four words, but how much they mean. They mean that money owned by Kentuckians will be kept within the borders of their state and applied to the development of the state's interests. The state gets a tax on the bonds by assessing a tax rate on the corporation that issues the bonds.

"When I see the truly marvelous development of Pennsylvania and its interests, I stand in wonder and amazement, trying to find its cause. I say aside from the state's great natural resources, it is due to the wise, just and equitable tax laws it has on its statute books. Do you know that notwithstanding the cost of our new State Capitol Building—nearly $30,000,000—almost equal to the cost of the Congressional Library Building at Washington, the state paid for it out of its revenues and the state now has not a debt of any kind, but a surplus in its Treasury?"

Long Live the King!

Is the popular cry throughout European countries; while in America, the cry of the present day is "Long live Dr. King's New Discovery, King of Throat and Lung Remedies!" of which Mrs. Julia Ryder Paine, Truro, Mass., says: "It never fails to give immediate relief and to quickly cure a cough or cold." Scene from "A WOMAN OF MYSTERY," at the Paris Grand, Friday, January 4.

At the Poor-house Door

By NANCY HAZLIP

Copyright, 1906, by Ruby Douglas

"I don't see why you would name a girl child Jessica—you might 'a' known she'd grow up so prim and high headed and hateful no man in his senses 'd ever want to marry her, and, land knows, women that don't marry have a hard time," Grandma Cole said to her son's meek widow.

Mrs. Cole answered a little tremulously. "But, mother, they do want to marry her. Jessy might 'a' had four proposals last year, if only she'd 'a' gone and let the men speak out."

"And who were the men, I'd like to know?" Grandma puffed, her throat swelling visibly. "Widderwers with nine children, or else one foot in the grave, or cranky old bachelors, or maybe even preachers. Besides, how can you know even a preacher wants to marry you unless he ups and says so? I never did hold with this way of makin' out every man that went to a house or even rode past it had a notion of goin' there courtin'."

She paused in breathless triumph. If Mrs. Lem Cole had been wise she would have held her peace. Grandma bore controverting very ill indeed, and to prove her in the wrong was to risk everything. Mrs. Lem knew that very well, but a goaded woman is often a desperate one. Therefore she burst out: "Well! Three of the men—and they weren't widowers nor preachers, but real good chances—asked me to ask Jessy if she'd listen to 'em. And the other one—"

"There wasn't any other one. Maria, I don't believe one word you're sayin'." Grandma broke out furiously. "Four proposals indeed! Why, Ann 'Liza didn't have but three in the whole of last year and the beaus around her all the time like bees around a honey pot."

"The other one was Jimmy Wakefield. And he wouldn't be stopped. Just up and asked Jessy like a man," Mrs. Lem said, not meekly, but with such red spots in her cheeks she looked almost as young as her daughter.

"Get out of here, you!" Grandma panted. "Jimmy Wakefield, indeed! Why he's never had a notion to anybody but Ann 'Liza. And she's goin' to take him, too, when she gets good and ready. Don't you dare talk of him wantin' that stick of a Jessy. If I thought there was any truth in what you've said I'd send you straight out of the house."

"Then we'll go without waiting to be sent," Jessy burst out from the doorway. She had been standing just outside, feeling somehow that her dear patient mother might need her help and countenance. "I don't like to tell, to say such things," she went on, "but mammy told the truth, nothing but the truth. And she shan't stay here to be insulted. Unless you ask her pardon we'll go away."

"Where? To the county poorhouse? I don't know any other chance for ye," Grandma said, white faced, her eyes flashing.

She was an imperious old lady, nobly partial to her namesake and favorite grandchild, Ann Eliza Wicks, partly because Ann Eliza was pretty and talking and impertinent, partly also because she had money enough of her own to be entirely independent.

Grandfather Cole had left everything to his wife. She held on to it with a grip of iron. All her five children had prospered except luckless Lemuel. He had left wife and daughter little except his ill luck. It had touched them so throughout the three years since his death they had at last been forced to accept the shelter Grandma had grudgingly offered.

"Teach school! You know I won't have that," grandma had said to Jessy's plan. "No, missy, I'll marry you off in a year. Then you can take your mother home with you. Remember beggars mustn't be choosers. You ain't quite a beggar. You'll get something when I die, of course. But I ain't going to see my husband's money wasted as long as I can help it, even if I had any to spare, which I haven't. It costs such a lot to do things. Why, just even half livin' nearly bankrupts me. Ann 'Liza has to have things. She's got a delicate appetite, and so notionate. She can afford to be, because she can keep on havin' what she wants when she comes to spendin' her own money. You've got no money to spend, so you'd better learn economy every way."

Jessy had been for going away then, but her mother's timorous fears had prevailed on her to stay. Jessy was not strictly pretty. Her eyes were too serious, her lips too severe. She had a good chin, fine and clean cut, and a lovely neck below it. Her hair was flaxen, her eyes a water blue.

Ann Eliza had black eyes and hair and very high color. Grandma thought her the prettiest creature in the world. She likewise thought Jessy hardly passable. But now as she faced her grandchild she saw a Jessica new and strange, one whose cheeks were damask roses.

The change startled her. She turned half about, saying in a grumbling voice: "Maria, you oughtn't to provoke me so. Go out in the garden. I'm comin' pretty shortly. And you, Jessy, tell the boy to bring round the buggy. I want you and Ann 'Liza to drive over to the store for me."

"I'm sorry, but I can't go," Jessy said, holding tight to her mother's hand. "I shall be busy—packing up and finding out how we can best get away."

"Oh, shut up! Stop your foolish talk!" grandma commanded fretfully.

Ann Eliza came in from the garden, both her hands full of dewy roses. "Here! Take these and fix the parlor vases," she commanded Jessica.

Jessy shook her head and turned toward the door. Grandma had weakened sensibly; she was on the point of mumbling out an apology. But as Ann Eliza cried pettishly, "I wish you'd look at that; I told you what would come of setting beggars on horseback!" her anger flamed up hotter than ever.

"You do as you're told," she cried, catching Jessica by the shoulders and trying to shake her. "You say you want to work for a livin'; prove it by waitin' on your betters."

Jessy set her teeth hard, broke from the quavery hold and rushed away. At the steps she stopped, smiled bitterly and shook the dust from her feet. Over her shoulder she called clearly, "Mother, meet me at the big gate in an hour; by then I shall know exactly what we can do."

Ten minutes later she stood in the Wakefield yard facing Jimmy, with her heart beating so it half suffocated her. She had so dreaded to tell what must be told—to ask the help that was imperative. It was not much, only to carry her mother and their scant belongings to the poorhouse. Any shelter would be better than the Cole roof. There was nobody else she could ask. Jimmy was the only friend within walking distance—moreover, the single person to whom she could bring herself to make such appeal. She was, in a way, bound to make it. She had promised, when she denied him that dearest promise, to call on him if she found herself in need of him. Now she was blessing him silently that he had not asked anything; had listened only to what she cared to tell and said afterward, with a little soothing touch on her hand: "You did right to come to me, Jessy. Of course I'll take you anywhere you may want to go."

"You, you must only send us. Black Billy can take us in the wagon. Grandma will be so angry if she knows you helped us escape," Jessica had answered, but at that Jimmy only smiled.

Very shortly he made her sit down on the bench under the big elm and went away whistling, to reappear, all in a whiff, driving a spanking pair, which drew a double seated vehicle spick and span.

"I think we'd better make the trip a quick one," was all he said in answer to Jessy's expostulation.

Almost before she knew it she was sitting beside him, bowling along the turnpike at the team's best pace. As quickly her mother was gathered up, and, the hand luggage properly bestowed, Jimmy amazed Jessy by bidding her sit behind, adding, "I want to talk to mammy—and these horses don't let me turn my head for any considerable time."

Jessy began to feel desperately lonely—she could not even divert herself by watching the dazle of the flying spokes as the wheels spun round. Jimmy was driving very fast, and keeping to the turnpike. It must be he meant to take them through town—that, no doubt, accounted for his choice of a rig. She knew he hated a shabby outfit—especially upon Saturdays and court days. It might be he had business that could not wait—but somehow she felt that he was unkind to think of anything but her extremity. Then she sank into a sort of daze, wondering dully how it would seem to find herself a pauper, duly committed. She had not thought of that before—of course there were legal forms before they could claim the last refuge of the destitute, and would not the authorities get back at grandma? She had a dim idea that well to do folk had to answer for their near kin.

No doubt that was what Jimmy was speaking about—he was talking low and eagerly to mammy. Yes, he was turning the horses toward the court-house square. In a wink they drew up there, and Jimmy, springing down, held out his arms to her. "You know there are arrangements—will you trust me to make them?" he asked very low.

Jessy could only bow her head; speech was beyond her. Jimmy looked at her, his eyes tender, yet mischievous. "I want to commit you for life to a poorhouse of which I am keeper," he whispered. "Mamma is willing. What do you say?"

"Nothing," Jessica said, but as she said it she laid her hand in Jimmy's strong clasp, and dropped her long lashed lids to veil a rush of happy tears.

A Clock Run by Man Power.

He was a fine old man who had been to South America, but who was devoted his old age to acting as the works of the clock in the piazza in Capri. It was he who rang those many, many bells we heard and puzzled over. Some forty rapid, high pitched bells at 12:42, seven bells of deeper tone at 3:06, and so on.

Adelaide had asked Archangelo, the old man's son, to explain these seeming irregularities and had learned that the bells were only intended to approximate the hour; that his father was old and occasionally forgot and rang too little or too much; also that he was but a man and that hunger sometimes came gnawing at his vitals at, say, 11:45, whereupon he rang for 12 o'clock and wandered home to his spaghetti. His appetite also accounted for occasional delays in the bell for 1 o'clock. Suppose Archangelo's mother was late in the cooking of the midday meal, could his father return to the piazza without his luncheon? And what does a quarter of an hour matter after all? In Capri it is truly dolce far niente.—Scribner's.

One of the Family.

"Are you the editor that takes in the society news?" inquired the caller, an undersized man, with a timid, appealing look on his face.

"Yes, sir," replied the young man at the desk. "I can take in any kind of news. What have you?"

"Why, it's this way," said the caller, lowering his voice: "My wife gave a swell party last night, and I'm willing to pay to have this report of the affair put in your paper."

"We don't charge anything for publishing society notes," observed the young man at the desk, taking the proffered manuscript and looking it over.

"That's all right," was the reply. "You don't understand. I wrote this up myself, and I put in a line or two that says, 'Mr. Halfstick assisted his distinguished wife in receiving the guests.' That's the way I want it to go in, and I don't care if it costs $5 a line. I want my friends to know, by George, that I still belong to the family!"

Not Soon Enough.

A man who is now one of the leading members of the Stock Exchange was rather wild in his youth, which is not an exclusive characteristic of this member of the Stock Exchange. But this man was a favorite with his mother and generally called on her to help him out of his scrapes, and she usually responded freely, even lavishly. On one occasion, however, when his demands had been especially frequent and extravagant, it was with considerable trepidation that, on discovering himself "the morning after" in a distant city and picked as clean as a new fledged sparrow, he penned the following heart moving appeal, to be sent C. O. D.: "Send $50 and save disgrace."

His worst fears were realized when, an hour later, he received the reply from his mother, "Too late."—New York Tribune.

The Robber's Grave at Montgomery.

In a corner of the churchyard of Montgomery, writes a correspondent, is a bare space, known as "the robber's grave." It is not a raised mound of earth, but is below the surrounding ground, which is especially luxuriant. The date of the grave is 1821, and numerous attempts have been made to grow grass upon the bare spot. Fresh soil was frequently spread upon it, but not a blade of grass is to be seen. The shape of a cross is still distinctly visible. It is the grave of a man named Newton, charged with highway robbery and violence and sentenced to be hanged. He protested his innocence. "In meek dependence of a merciful God, whom I have offended, but who, through the atonement of his blessed Son, has, I trust, pardoned my offenses, I venture to assert that if I am innocent of the crime for which I suffer the grass for one generation at least will not cover my grave." Men of eighty bear witness that never since they were children has there been grass on the grave.—Westminster Gazette.

Traveling Incognito.

Some investigator of curious subjects has discovered that the inventor of traveling incognito was Peter the Great of Russia. The next after the famous Russian sovereign to adopt the practice was Joseph II. of Austria, who in 1777 made a little stay in Paris under the title of Count von Falkenstein. During the revolutionary period Louis XVIII. buried his temporarily useless royal dignity under the privacy of Comte de Lille, while Charles X. passed as the Comte de Marles. The ex-Empress Eugenie in her splendor frequently took little trips as the Comtesse de Pierrefonds.

A Valuable Agent.

The glycerine employed in Dr. Pierce's medicines greatly enhances the medicinal properties which it extracts and holds in solution much better than alcohol would. It also possesses medicinal properties of its own, being a valuable demulcent, nutritive, antiseptic and antiferment. It adds greatly to the efficacy of the Black Cherrybark, Golden Seal root, Stone root and Queen's root, captained in "Golden Medical Discovery" in subduing chronic, or lingering coughs, bronchial, throat and lung affections, for all of which these agents are recommended by standard medical authorities.
In all cases where there is a wasting away of flesh, loss of appetite, with weak stomach, as in the early stages of consumption, there can be no doubt that glycerine acts as a valuable nutritive and aids the Golden Seal root, Stone root, Queen's root and Black Cherrybark in promoting digestion and building up the flesh and strength, controlling the cough and bringing about a healthy condition of the whole system. Of course, it must not be expected to work miracles. It will not cure consumption except in its earlier stages. It will cure very severe, obstinate, chronic coughs, bronchial and laryngeal troubles, and chronic sore throat with hoarseness. In acute coughs it is not so effective. It is in the lingering coughs, or those of long standing, even when accompanied by bleeding from lungs, that it has performed its most marvelous cures. Send for and read the little book of extracts, treating of the properties and uses of the several medicinal roots that enter into Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and learn why this medicine has such a wide range of application in the cure of diseases. It is sent free. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y. The "Discovery" contains no alcohol or harmful habit-forming drug. Ingredients all printed on each bottle wrapper in plain English.
Sick people, especially those suffering from diseases of long standing, are invited to consult Dr. Pierce by letter, free. All correspondence is held as strictly private and sacredly confidential. Address Dr.
R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Some Theories And a Bear Trap

By C. B. LEWIS

Copyright, 1906, by M. M. Cunningham

Uncle Peter Scott, farmer on the outskirts of the village of Hillside, had lost his good wife, and his daughter Jennie kept house for him. He had got to be fifty years old and finicky, while she had got to be twenty and was called one of the nicest girls in Adams county.

Tom Barlow, the youngest of the village merchants, agreed with all others.
He had driven out to see Jennie on half a dozen occasions on Sunday afternoons, and it was whispered around that a marriage would come of it. The father had scratched his head and said nothing, but in his own mind he had regarded it as a good match.

All was going well when an interruption suddenly occurred. Mr. Barlow dealt in hoes, rakes and shovels as well as in dry goods and groceries. Uncle Peter bought a hoe of him and started into the cornfield one morning to make the dirt fly. The hoe pleased him, the air was balmy and the corn was knee high and still growing. He was humming to himself and wondering how long before he would lose Jennie when he pulled over a sod with his hoe and caught sight of a big fat mole under neath.

The life or death of that mole had little to do with the future prosperity of Adams county, but Uncle Peter jumped in with intent to slaughter. He made three or four blows with the hoe and finally one tremendous blow. The mole was immolated, but at the same time the handle of the hoe was broken and the old man fell forward and plowed his nose into the ground. He got up mad. He was mad at the mole, the hoe and himself, and he jumped up and down and used cuss words.

One does not remain mad at himself very long. He finds some one else to blame for the whole thing. In this case Uncle Peter put the calamity on the shoulders of Mr. Barlow. He had sold him a hoe handle that was weak in the back—sold it with intent to defraud and deceive. Uncle Peter had sold short tons of hay more than once, but when any one cheated him he looked upon it as a wrong to all humanity.
He was near the roadside fence when he massacred the mole, and he had just got the dirt out of his mouth after the fall when a man he knew came driving along in his buggy.

He naturally asked what was the matter, and the old man cut loose. He called the merchant a cheat, fraud and swindler and vowed by the whiskers of his ancestors that he would never never buy again more of him. He wanted his words repeated, and they were.

When the father went up to the house after another hoe and the daughter asked what was the matter he had more to say about the merchant and something particular to say to her. He made more fuss about that broken hoe handle than the county commissioners had in building a bridge over Goose creek, and he ended off with:

"Now, you gal, listen to me. If that swindler ever sets foot on my land again I'll cut-u-sh him as I would a-a-mouse!"

Jennie argued and protested and tried to soothe, but the father was obdurate. He told her of the message he had sent to town, and she wrote a few lines of excuse to Mr. Barlow and sent them by a passing boy. That afternoon several persons had several theories to advance to themselves.

Uncle Peter held to his anger. His theory was that Mr. Barlow would drive out in the evening and try to get speech with Jennie and seek to excuse his disgraceful conduct in selling for 25 cents a hoe not worth a dime.

Jennie's theory was that the merchant would drive out with half a dozen hoes in his buggy and tell her father to take them all, but she feared the result. The old man was mad all through, and it always took him at least a week to get over one of his fits.
Old Mrs. Davis, who lived just across the road, heard something about the broken hoe, and her theory was that there would be a row of some sort and that she would be there to hear and to see.

The merchant didn't have any particular theory. He simply made up his mind to drive out to Uncle Peter's and tell him to come in and help himself to hoes, rakes and shovels without stint.

Nothing further of moment happened during the day. It was after supper when Uncle Peter was milking the brindle cow that he got another theory. It might have worked well had not his daughter observed him half an hour later oiling up the springs of a bear trap that had hung in the barn for the last twenty years. Then she got a new theory. Her father hoped and intended that some one should walk into that trap. It must be the man who sold him the deceptive hoe that he was laying for. Old Mrs. Davis kept her eye on the Scott homestead between sundown and dark, and, though no tragedy took place, she turned to her husband and said:

"Andrew, something is goin' to happen. I feel it in my bones. I've got a theory that there's goin' to be awful doin's across the road tonight."

Father and daughter sat on the porch till the clock struck 9, and then the girl arose and entered the house to go to bed. That was his chance. He jumped down on the grass and ran for his bear trap and set it just inside the gate and ten minutes later was winding up the clock with an innocent expression of countenance calculated to deceive the cat.

"Now, why did father linger behind?" asked Jennie of herself as she went upstairs, and, poking her head out of a front window, she saw him engaged in some nefarious business on the path—something that she investigated fifteen minutes later and dragged to one side on the lawn.

The merchant had been detained. He had also forgotten that farmers refined to their beds when the hens went to roost. It was 10 o'clock when he came driving out. Jennie heard him coming and walked down the road to meet him. Knowing her father as she did, she knew that a present of a dozen new hoes that night would not suffice to soothe his injured feelings.
It would be best to notify Mr. Barlow of this fact and turn him back and say, good night.

At about the hour mentioned above Uncle Peter roused up out of a doze with a new theory. It was to the effect that some lightning rod men might come along in the night and seek to arouse the house for lodgings and step into that waiting bear trap.
He was about to get up when he remembered that a man of lightning had cheated him out of $10 five years before, and he therefore decided not to budge. He had just come to this decision when old Mrs. Davis said:

"Andrew, I'm goin' to get up and go over to Scott's."

"What for?" he dreamily asked.

"I've got a theory that Uncle Peter has hung himself in the wood shed."

"Nonsense!"

"Don't say 'nonsense' to me. I never had a theory yet that didn't turn out right. I'm goin' right over there, and if you hear me yell out you'll know what has happened."

She partly dressed and left the house.
Jennie and Mr. Barlow and the horse and buggy were not so far away that she could not have made them out had she been less occupied with her theory, but as it was they escaped her notice.
The wood shed to every well regulated house is in the rear. It was so in the case of the Scott home. To reach it old Mrs. Davis had to leave the straight path, and she hadn't made above ten steps when there was a scream and a long drawn yell to freeze the blood of all hearers. Uncle Peter heard it as he was beginning to dream of broken hoe handles and fat moles, and he jumped out of bed.

Old Mr. Davis heard it as he dozed and wondered about theories, and out of bed he came with his hair trying to stand on end. Jennie and Mr. Barlow heard it and started forward with exclamations of alarm, and thus it happened that the four reached old Mrs.
Davis at about the same time. She had been caught in the bear trap, of course, in leaving the path she had stepped fairly into it, and as the jaws came together she felt, as she said afterward, that the last day had come and she was ready to sail away.

There was an exciting time for the next ten minutes. The poor old woman was frightened half to death, and a good deal bruised by the teeth of the trap, and while she was being carried across the road her husband was announcing his determination to have satisfaction under the law. Uncle Peter realized that his theory had failed, and Jennie and Mr. Barlow had been discovered conspiring, as it were. It wasn't until the victim had been put to bed, her hurts attended to by a doctor and her husband calmed down by a promise that the right thing should be done that Uncle Peter turned on the young folks and demanded:

"Well, what you got to say about all this?"

"Nothing, father," answered Jennie.

"Nothing, Mr. Scott," added the merchant.

"Well, I dunno as I have, either," observed the mole killer, as he jogged into the house and left the others at the gate to talk things over.

Everybody buys from Winters, so the song goes.

ASTRONOMY FOR LANDSMEN

How a Watch or Clock May Be Regulated by Observing a Star.

When some investigator makes the "discovery" that the points of the compass can be approximately determined by looking at the sun and using a watch to show the divisions of the plane it is apt to go the rounds of the press as something very peculiar. If this discoverer were sufficiently conversant with the principles of navigation to note for the public benefit that the running of a watch or clock may be regulated by observing a star he might confer some practical benefit.
This is a very simple thing to do and might be of great use in a country place where accurate time is not always obtainable, but all that is necessary is a fixed location on the earth's surface and any old thing in the way of a timepiece.

Choose a south window from which any other fixed point comparatively near and high, such as a chimney, side of a building, etc., may be seen. To the side of a window fasten a piece of card having a small hole in it, so that by looking through the hole with one eye toward the edge of the elevated object some fixed star may be seen.
Watch the progress of the star, and the instant it vanishes behind the fixed point the observer must note the exact time it disappears. Watch the same star the following night, and it will vanish behind the same object just three minutes and fifty-six seconds sooner. If the timepiece marks 9 o'clock when the star disappears one night it should indicate three minutes and fifty-six seconds less than 9 the following night. If several cloudy nights occur together, follow the first observation and deduct the product from clock time to find the true time the star will pass.

Of course the same star can only be observed during a few weeks, for, as it gains nearly an hour in a fortnight, it will in a short time come to the meridian in broad daylight and become invisible. To make sure the observer is watching a star instead of a planet, he should notice that stars twinkle, whereas planets give a steady light because reflected, and, if he wishes further assurance, he may observe that all fixed stars appear to maintain the same relative positions with regard to each other, most noticeable with the different stars in the constellations, whereas a planet changes its place with regard to the other stars. This method of verifying time is easier and more reliable than the shadow on a sundial. In the famous observatory at Greenwich, England, from which longitude is counted, the clock by which chronometers are set is regulated in just about this manner, but over 200 of the fixed stars are observed. The observations are taken with a telescope, across the center of which is the line of a spider's web to mark the meridian.—Marine Journal.

The English Longbow.

The range and power of the English longbow in its palmiest days were extraordinary, notes a writer in Chambers' Journal. We have seen and handled one of these bows, said to have been used at Flodden. It measured six feet unstrung and the arrow three feet. The pull must have been quite 100 pounds. To draw the cloth yard shaft on such a bow would probably defy the powers of even an exceptionally strong man nowadays. But good Bishop Latimer in his well known eulogy of English archery has shown us how from their boyhood Englishmen were scientifically trained in the use of the bow till, like Justice Shallow's hero, old Double, they could "clap in the clout at twelvescore yards." Up to what distance the old longbow was really effective is a question not easy to answer, but from the data we possess it may safely be assumed that against anything but armor of proof the cloth yard shaft was deadly up to 300 yards while for combined rapidity and efficiency in shooting no weapon could compare with the longbow till the introduction of the breechloader.

Fellow Strugglers.

There were some things which the woman who had lived for twenty years in a beautiful but lonely spot within sight of the White mountains had borne just as long as she could, and she did not care who knew it.

"What a rest it must be to you at the end of the day's work to look at those great calm hills standing there in the waning light," said an enthusiastic traveler who had stopped for a glass of water.

The inhabitant of Ridge Hill farm looked at her visitor with a hint of scoorn in her face, although her tone was good natured enough. "I've looked at them hills just as many times as I'm ever going to when I'm tired," she said slowly. "I save 'em now for Sundays when I'm some rested up. When I'm mad and tired and ache all over I go out back and look at my tomato vines and potatoes. They're both got things to contend with here, same as I have. That's what soothes me more'n any hills."

A Bird That Shaves.

Man is not the only living creature that shaves. The bonnet, a South American bird, takes a dry shave regularly. The bonnet has long blue tail feathers. Each quill is adorned from base to tip with soft blue down. This arrangement the bird dislikes. Therefore with its sharp beak it nips the quills bare from the base out to about an inch from the tip, where it maintains a neat oval of soft blue whisker.
Such action seems silly on the bonnet's part to certain philosophers, though it seems no sillier than man's action in regularly scraping bare his cheeks and chin, while he maintains in his upper lip an oval of soft hair not unlike the bonnet's tail oval.

A GOOD NIGHT'S REST

"Speak for it!" she cried to doggie,
For she knew in her little heart,
That German Syrup, home's great treasure,
Could health and joy impart.

The greatest tonic on earth is a good night's rest. Restless nights and the terrible exhaustion of a hacking cough are dread dangers of the poor consumptive.
But why this fear of the night when a few doses of Dr. Boschee's German Syrup will insure refreshing sleep, entirely free from cough or night sweat? Free ex-pectorator in the morning is made certain by taking German Syrup.
We know by the experience of over thirty-five years that one 75-cent bottle of German Syrup will speedily relieve the worst coughs, colds, bronchial lung troubles—and that, even in bad cases of consumption, one large bottle of German Syrup will work wonders.

Shaw's New Ruling.
Secretary Shaw has issued a circular in which he decides that hereafter no surety company shall accept, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved August 13, 1904, as sole surety on any stipulation of bond in which the United States is interested for an amount greater than 10 per cent. of its paid up capital and surplus, unless such company shall be secure as to any excess by reinsurance to the satisfaction of the Department. Two or more companies may be accepted on any bond, the penalty of which does not exceed 10 per cent. of their aggregate paid up capital.

It Wasn't His Fault.
Little Tommy was a student in one of the primary grades of the City School and he had gotten into the bad habit of making faces behind his teacher's back at school. He always prided himself on his smartness at never being caught, but he made an ugly grimace once too often.
"What are you doing, you bad boy?" demanded the wrathful teacher, flashing round and almost withering the lad with a fierce look.
"Oh, please ma'am," whimpered Tommy, "I was going to laugh, but my face slipped."

What She Heard.
A South Main street lady had given her butcher her daily order over the telephone, and later in the day decided to change it a little and countermand an order she had given for some liver. Ringing up her butcher she said: "You remember that I gave you an order for a pound of liver a while ago?"
"Yes," was the reply. "Well, I find that I do not need it, and you need not send it." Before she could put down the receiver she heard the butcher say to someone in the shop: "Take out Mrs. Blank's liver. She says she can get along without it."

Our line is the best that's made. That's all.

Weighing the Pig.

A farmer wanted to weigh a pig, but had no scales. Knowing that his own weight was 190 lbs., and that of his wife 130 pounds, he placed a board over the top of the fence like a seesaw so that a perfect balance was made, he on one end, she on the other. Then they changed places on the board, the wife taking the pig in her lap, which again perfectly balanced the board. How much did the pig weigh?

Everybody says if it comes from Winters' it's all right.

Wanted Christmas Cheer.
The five counties surrounding Maysville are all local option territory and on Christmas Eve two houses in that city sent out eighteen hundred quart bottles filled with whisky besides a number of gallon and half gallon jugs. Other houses in the city also did a rushing business along this line.

A Thoughtful Convict.

"Yes," said the warden, "he was the coolest and most thoughtful convict who ever broke jail."
"You don't say?" exclaimed the visitor.
"Yes; he left behind him a note to the governor of the state beginning: 'I hope you will pardon me for the liberty I'm taking.'"

To Walk On Water.

A remarkable ambition has been displayed by a Cincinnati man, who wants to start from Cincinnati on cedar shoes, each three feet four inches in length, six inches wide and weighing ten pounds, and go down the Ohio river to Cairo, Ill., and then down the Mississippi river to New Orleans without touching the shore on the way.
A representative of Charles W. Oldrieve, the man who is going to attempt the feat, called at the Louisville Life-saving station a few days ago and asked permission for Oldrieve to be allowed to go over the falls on his way down, and Captain Devan told him that he could not stop him if he wished to go, but said that if Oldrieve had an accident going over the falls his life-saving crew would launch a boat and try to rescue him.
Some of the life-saving crew questioned the man concerning the object of Oldrieve's scheme, and he told them in substance that Oldrieve was walking on the water to win a wager. Oldrieve's representative also said that a small launch would be with Oldrieve at all times, and at night Oldrieve would be allowed to sleep in it.
Oldrieve is expected to attempt his feat on January 1, starting from Cincinnati.
